

WAWI Eating Disorders Clinical Service

Description:

The William Alanson White Institute was founded in 1943 and has provided in-depth treatment for a wide variety of difficulties in living since that time. The Eating Disorders/Substance Abuse Service offers individuals with a history of addiction an opportunity to work toward substantive character change through psychoanalytic psychotherapy. All clinicians are licensed psychologists or psychiatrists who are either graduates or current matriculants of the William Alanson White program in psychoanalysis. They are trained in working with the special concerns of those experiencing a full range of eating disorders and/or compulsive addictive disorders. A moderate level sliding fee scale is available when there is financial need.
